

Congratulations to Paul Silverstein, M.D.

for 35 Years of Dedicated Plastic Surgery and Burn Care to Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA

In 1974, Dr. Paul Silverstein moved to Oklahoma City. He'd just recently completed several years of service at Emory University in Atlanta and as a Major with the United States Army at The Institute of Surgical Research. Because of the work he'd done caring for burn victims of the Vietnam War, Baptist Medical Center recruited him to design and direct the new burn center they desired to open at the hospital.

Dr. Silverstein agreed and, now, the same burn center he helped develop bears his name: The Integris Paul Silverstein Burn Center. That's just one example of Dr. Silverstein's dedication to providing quality medical care in Oklahoma City.

A self-described "old-fashioned family doctor," Dr. Silverstein has built a lifetime of medical service on the tenets of integrity, compassion and personal physician-patient relationships. He believes very strongly in the importance of being part of the community and he's proud to have made a life for himself and his family in Oklahoma. Most of all, though, he's honored to have made a positive difference for the countless patients he's served over the years.

Of all this, Dr. Silverstein says he's lucky. No one would disagree, but his patients have a different perspective: they're lucky to have him. Widely published, Harvard and University of Pennsylvania educated and board certified in both general and plastic surgery, Dr. Silverstein is known around the country — and the world — as a leader in burn care and rehabilitation, and plastic and cosmetic surgery. He provides a complete continuum of advanced surgical procedures and his patients trust his skill and attention to detail for facelifts, blephroplasty, liposuction, laser peels, breast augmentation and more.

In fact, Dr. Silverstein has performed over 6,000 breast augmentation procedures and women travel from as far away as Europe and Australia to have him complete their surgery. What's more, Dr. Silverstein is one of only a few surgeons with the expertise required to perform the transaxial incision, which allows breast implant placement with only a small, hidden scar under the arm and no scars on the breast or chest wall.

Superb medical skill and knowledge aside, though, it is Dr. Silverstein's incomparable commitment to his patients that truly sets him apart. Men and women who have experienced his level of care for themselves regularly send their friends, their children and even their grandchildren to Dr. Silverstein hoping for excellent results.

A decorated War Veteran, a dedicated doctor, an internationally recognized plastic surgeon and a friend to each patient... Thank you, Dr. Silverstein, for your service to the people of Oklahoma!

"I'm very grateful for my practice and my patients. There's simply no greater honor than to make a positive difference in a patient's life." — Paul Silverstein, M.D.
